THE LUDARIUM · TEACH SHEET

Teach Marvel Champions: The Card Game in ten minutes

1 to 4 players · 45 to 90 minutes · Ages 14 and up

The goal: Work together to defeat the villain's final stage before threat completes the final main scheme.

On your turn

1. Player phase: each player takes a full turn, in player order.
2. On your turn: play cards, use abilities, attack, thwart, and change form once.
3. Pay costs by discarding cards from hand for their resource icons.
4. End of player phase: discard or draw to hand size, then ready everything.
5. Villain phase: place threat on the main scheme, then the villain activates once per player.
6. Hero form: the villain attacks you. Alter-ego form: the villain schemes.
7. Each player is dealt an encounter card, revealed in player order.
8. Pass the first player token clockwise.

Three tips for your first game

1. Teach the two forms first. Everything else hangs on hero or alter-ego.
2. Say out loud: one encounter card per player, every villain phase.
3. Watch the main scheme each round. Most first games are lost to threat, not damage.

Setup

1. Each player picks a hero, alter-ego side up, and sets their hit point dial.
2. Pick a first player. Set aside each hero's obligation and nemesis set.
3. Shuffle each player deck. Make a pool of tokens and status cards.
4. Choose a villain. Set its hit points: the printed value times the number of players.
5. Shuffle the scenario's encounter sets with the obligations to make the encounter deck.
6. Follow side 1A of the main scheme, flip to 1B, and place its starting threat.
7. Draw up to your hand size. You may mulligan once.

Scoring

- Win: defeat the villain's final stage.
- Lose: threat on the final main scheme stage reaches its target.
- Lose: every player's identity is defeated.
- Each villain activation gets one facedown boost card, flipped for extra ATK or SCH.

Game end: The game ends the moment the final villain stage is defeated, the final main scheme is completed, or the last identity falls.
